Coaching Guide - GROW & Job Redesign

Evidence status: SIM - all data is fictional. A one-page primer for the role-play in Activity 6.

The GROW model

A simple, four-stage way to coach someone. Move through it in order, and listen more than you talk.

| Stage | What it means | Ask something like... |
|---|---|---|
| G - Goal | What does the person want? | "If this went well, what would your job look like in six months?" |
| R - Reality | What is actually happening now? | "What is the agent doing today that used to be yours?" |
| O - Options | What could they do about it? | "What parts of your work could you own more if the agent handled the routine bits?" |
| W - Will | What will they commit to? | "What is one thing you'll try this week, and who can support you?" |

Job-redesign framework

Use this once the person feels heard. Redesign the role around the agent, not against it.

1. List the tasks in the person's current role.
2. Mark the agent-doable ones - repetitive, high-volume, rule-based tasks.
3. Redesign the human role around judgement - checking, deciding, handling exceptions, the human touch with customers.
4. Add agent-management skills - spotting AI errors, writing good prompts, approving or rejecting agent actions, owning the final call.
5. Retrain - agree what to learn and how the organisation will support it.

5 good coaching phrases

1. "Tell me more about what's worrying you."
2. "That makes sense - a lot of people feel that way at first."
3. "What part of your work do you most enjoy that a machine can't do?"
4. "Where could you add value by checking and improving what the agent produces?"
5. "What support would make this feel manageable?"

5 phrases to avoid

1. "Don't worry, it's fine." (dismisses the fear)
2. "You'll just have to adapt." (no support offered)
3. "The agent is better at this than you anyway." (demoralising)
4. "Everyone's job is changing, deal with it." (cold, generic)
5. "Here's exactly what you should do..." (jumps to solutions before listening)
